CERUS MARKETS' products and services are intended only for professional and institutional investors. In the US, such institutional investors must qualify as an eligible contract participant pursuant to section 1a(18) of the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936 (7 U.S.C. 1a(18)), as amended. Trading derivative financial contracts, including foreign exchange, contracts for differences, precious metals, or other over-the-counter products traded on margin or otherwise, carries a high level of risk and may not be suitable for all investors. The high degree of leverage associated with trading such contracts can result in substantial losses, as well as gains. Past performance is not indicative of future results, which can vary due to market volatility; it should not be interpreted as a forecast of future performance. Careful consideration should be exercised in determining whether such trading is suitable for any investor in light of its financial condition, level of experience and appetite for risk, and advice should be sought from an independent financial advisor in the event of any doubt. Unless otherwise stated, any pricing information given in this e-mail is indicative only, is subject to change and does not constitute an offer to deal at any price quoted. Any reference to the terms of any executed transaction should only be treated as preliminary and is subject to formal written confirmation. Internet communications cannot be guaranteed to be timely, secure, error or virus-free. Unless otherwise stated or where required under applicable law or regulation, CERUS MARKETS may not accept any orders, transactions or instructions to facilitate trading activity for any account through e-mail and is not liable for any errors or omissions communicated by e-mail.
